Pounded the Dog to Death. The most novel fight I ever witremarked a traveler to a remine had a hulldog that had belied every canine on the islant and he was very proud of him. A gentleman from South America said he had a moukey that could whap the builded and the After some talk a wager of $500 was at Dro made and the only advantage that the ey was to have was that he was to be allowed the privilege of using a baton, about the length of a policeman's club, but not so heavy. The fight was in a public place, and in a There was a big crowd out see the fight. Of course every thought the dog would chew up the monkey. After a few minutes, how ever, the audience was surprised at the The bulldog would make a rush at the monkey, and the latter would jump aside and allow the bulldog to hir his head against the iron gratings. This was kept up for twenty min-ites or more, and taen the dog began to get tired. The monkey be-gan to fight. He would let the dog make a rush and then jump on the deg's back and strike him several times with the baton. This was kept op for an hour or more, and finally the log fell on the floor completely ex hausted, and the monkey would strike the dog several blows, and then p'ace his ear to the canine to see if he still

This was FINE (one of the peculiarities of the mankey, PLASTER owner of the dog said he did not want his dog killed, and insisted on taking the monkey off. While they were talking the monkey belied the dog several times with his baton, placed his ear on the dog, and with a sudden jimp leaped on the shoulder of his jowner and commenced to use monkey language. The dog was examined and They always killed their victims. The language. The dog was examined and ound to be dead. The people aplooked as if the monkey understood SMOOT & CO.,

With brilliant balls of fire, seemingly strung to her yardarms and wire rigging and cracking like pistol shots, the superstitious sailors on board the ship Waterloo thought their end had come. The Waterloo, which arrived here yesterday, was on her way from London to Philadelphia, and while on the grand banks was in the midst of the electrical influence of the beautiful auroral dis play last month. The darkness of night was turned into brilliant light and the decks of the Waterloo were as light as under the glare of the noouday
